

UbD: Stages of Backward Design

Stage 1. Identify desired results.

Guiding Questions

- What are the established goals?
- What “big ideas” do we want students to come to understand?
- What essential questions will stimulate inquiry?
- What knowledge and skills need to be acquired given the understandings and related content standards? What focus questions will guide students to targeted knowledge and skills?

Stage 2. Determine acceptable evidence.

Guiding Questions

- What is sufficient and telling evidence of understanding?
- Keeping the goals in mind, what performance tasks should anchor and focus the unit?
- What criteria will be used to assess the work?
- Will the assessment reveal and distinguish those who really understand versus those who only seem to understand?

3. Plan learning experiences and instruction.

Guiding Questions

- What instructional strategies and learning activities are needed to achieve the results identified in Stage 1 and reflected in the assessment evidence specified in Stage 2?

Cases on Research-Based Teaching Methods in Science Education de Silva, Eugene, 2014-08-31 While the great scientists of the past recognized a need for a multidisciplinary approach today schools often treat math and science as subjects separate from the rest. This not only creates a disinterest among students but also a potential learning gap once students reach college and then graduate into the workforce. Cases on Research Based Teaching Methods in Science Education addresses the problems currently facing science education in the USA and the UK and suggests a new hands on approach to learning. This book is an essential reference source for policymakers academicians researchers educators curricula developers and teachers as they strive to improve education at the elementary secondary and collegiate levels.

STEM Education: Concepts, Methodologies, Tools, and Applications Management Association, Information Resources, 2014-12-31 This reference brings together an impressive array of research on the development of Science Technology Engineering and Mathematics curricula at all educational levels. Competency-Based Teacher Education for English as a Foreign Language Amber Yayan Wang, 2021-11-25 Providing a series of chapters written by teacher educators in three continents this edited volume explores the concepts challenges possibilities and implementations of competency based instruction for developing English competencies in English as a foreign language EFL contexts. Recent trends in education have emphasized the need to develop competencies that connect learning with real life performances. This need has brought about a massive increase in the number of studies and scholarly works devoted to research into competency based education. However for teachers and learners of EFL it is challenging to develop competencies for using a language that does not seem to connect with their real life scenarios. The chapters apply the concept of competency based instruction in different EFL contexts and are structured around three themes Theory current thoughts on theories of competency based education Research empirical research on competency based teacher education Practice integrating competency based instruction into teacher education. This book offers examples of competency based EFL teacher education through both research and practical applications. In addition to the innovation in competency approaches the inclusion of language learning in virtual environments offers a valuable resource for scholars.
