

8. (Adapted from a problem in the Patterson/Hennessy book) Consider the following portions of several portions of a program running at the same time on a multicore processor where all cores share the same memory. Assume that before any code is run, both  $x$  and  $y$  are 0.

Core 1:  $x = 2;$

Core 2:  $y = 2;$

Core 3:  $w = x + y + 1;$

Core 4:  $z = x + y;$

What are all the possible combinations of resulting values of  $w$ ,  $x$ ,  $y$ , and  $z$ ? For each combination, indicate the order that the operations would have to be performed to produce that result. You will need to consider all possible interleavings of the instructions. (Hint: there are  $4! = 24$  possible interleavings of the instructions, resulting in 9 different combinations, all of which can be arrived at in more than one way. Give all possibilities for each.

Example: One possible combination is  $x = 2$ ,  $y = 2$ ,  $w = 5$ ,  $z = 4$  which can be arrived at by doing the operations in the order 1 2 3 4 or 1 2 4 3 or 2 1 3 4 or 2 1 4 3 )
