- Adjustable volume control

- Intercom function that enables the pilot and copilot to communicate with each other via their headphones without speaker output. This function is only used if the aircraft's audio panel does not have an intercom function.

- Auto squelch function with manual override. The ADR-7050's auto squelch feature sets a radio noise threshold to silence unwanted noise. The auto squelch level is set using a maintenance computer. Anything below the set threshold is silenced. When squelch is deactivated by the pilot, he will hear noise if no signal is present on the tuned channel. The ADR-7050 provides indication if the squelch is broken.

- Stuck mic condition indication. The ADR-7050 detects a stuck microphone switch if the Push To Talk (PTT) switch is active for more than 35 seconds. If the switch is stuck, the switch becomes unusable.

The com radio's volume, squelch setting, sidetone levels, channel spacing and squelch threshold can be set by the flight system.

NOTE

All ADR-7050 functions are controlled through various Multi-Function Displays (MFDs). Refer to the AFMS and specific documentation supplied with your cockpit displays for more detailed instructions.

Nav Radio Features

- VOR receiver operation in the range of 108.00–117.95 MHz in 50 kHz increments

- Localizer receiver operation in the range of 108.00–111.95 MHz

- Glideslope receiver operation in the range of 329.150–335.00 MHz

- Adjustable volume control

- Nav ID Filtering. When the filter is on, any voice-over is silenced and only the Morse code identifier is heard. The ADR-7050 decodes the Morse code IDs from the tuned localizer or VOR stations and sends the alphanumeric station IDs to be displayed.

VOR, Localizer, & Glideslope Receivers

The nav radio also provides VOR, localizer and glide slope signals to the flight system. When in the VOR mode, you can enter an OmniBearing Select (OBS) setting through the flight system. The VOR receiver determines the appropriate Course Deviation Indicator (CDI) output to send back to the flight system based on the received signal and the OBS input. The VOR receiver also outputs the nav audio signal and automatically decodes the Morse code identifier from the VOR station.
