Journal Of Cancer Therapy Impact Factor 22:

DNA Repair in Cancer Therapy Mark R. Kelley, 2011-10-20 Cancer therapeutics include an ever increasing array of tools at the disposal of clinicians in their treatment of this disease. However cancer is a tough opponent in this battle and current treatments which typically include radiotherapy chemotherapy and surgery are not often enough to rid the patient of his or her cancer. Cancer cells can become resistant to the treatments directed at them and overcoming this drug resistance is an important research focus. Additionally increasing discussion and research is centering on targeted and individualized therapy. While a number of approaches have undergone intensive and close scrutiny as potential approaches to treat and kill cancer signaling pathways, multidrug resistance, cell cycle checkpoints, anti angiogenesis etc other approaches have focused on blocking the ability of a cancer cell to recognize and repair the damaged DNA that primarily results from the front line cancer treatments chemotherapy and radiation. This comprehensive and timely reference focuses on the translational and clinical use of DNA repair as a target area for the development of diagnostic biomarkers and the enhancement of cancer treatment. Saves academic medical and pharmaceutical researchers time in quickly accessing the very latest details on DNA repair and cancer therapy as opposed to searching through thousands of journal articles. Provides a common language for cancer researchers, oncologists and radiation oncologists to discuss their understanding of new molecular pathways, clinical targets and anti cancer drug development. Provides content for researchers and research clinicians to understand the importance of the breakthroughs that are contributing to advances in disease specific research.

Impact of Genetic Targets on Cancer Therapy Wafik S El-Deiry, 2013-01-05 The volume provides a forum for original peer reviewed short communications, full length research and review articles on new research findings and developments on the topic of genetic targets on cancer therapies. As the field is highly important it requires co operation between research communities from all over the world to share their knowledge and experience in order to move the field forward. Each chapter includes a discussion of the impact of the tumor microenvironment and cancer stem cells and cover current knowledge in this area as it pertains to the disease including emerging therapy targeting the microenvironment and or cancer stem cells.

Peripheral Blood-Based Biomarkers for Immune Monitoring of Cancer and Cancer Therapy José Manuel Pinto Silva Casanova, Paulo Rodrigues-Santos, Raquel Tarazona, 2025-06-02 Peripheral blood immune monitoring of cancer therapy is a crucial aspect of assessing the immune response and evaluating the efficacy of cancer treatments. However there are several challenges associated with this process: heterogeneity of the immune system, dynamic nature of the immune response, lack of standardized assays and protocols, low frequency of immune cells, tumor heterogeneity and antigen escape, overlapping effects of systemic therapies, need for expertise and sophisticated data analysis and interpretation of complex datasets. Beyond the traditional immune cell subsets like T cells and B cells, new innate, innate-like and unconventional immune cells
