damaged or die generating a loss in brain communication Also many of these mutations generate aggregation of intracellular or extracellular proteins affecting cell function and eventually causing neuronal death It is unclear whether the presence of these aggregates play an important role in nerve cell death during the development of neurodegenerative diseases or if they are simply part of the response of cells to the disease Other mutations affect the mitochondrial function generating alterations in energy production and promoting the formation of unstable molecules such as free radicals Under normal conditions the harmful effects caused by free radicals are offset within the cell However in pathological conditions the presence of mutations can alter this process by allowing the accumulation of radicals and damaging or killing cells On the other hand we also know that these diseases may not have a direct genetic component thus the study of sporadic type neurodegenerative diseases is much more complex Histopathological lesions as well as the cellular and molecular alterations are generally indistinguishable from familial cases For this reason it is important to understand the genetic and molecular mechanisms associated with this type of pathologies In this sense this issue aims to understand the molecular processes that occur in the brain and how these are influenced by the environment genetics and behavior
