

Potential interview questions and answers for restaurant jobs

There are tons of questions you could be asked in a restaurant job interview, especially to suit the locality and type of restaurant, but, bearing in mind that it will have regular long hours, especially evenings and weekends, the following questions are the most likely to be asked with tips on how to answer them.

1. "Tell me about yourself"

This is likely to come at the beginning in order to lead you in gently, to help you feel relaxed and provide a topic you know the most about - you! Give a short summary of your personality, passions and hobbies, qualifications, career history and specific skills. Add anything you might be involved in just now like social clubs and responsibilities. Keep it brief without rambling too much.

2. "What are your strengths?"

This is for assessing your suitability, to see whether you would fit that hothouse environment or not. Think about a few of your main strengths, but try to focus on skills that would be useful and relevant to the new company. Good examples are communication, interacting with others, sales, IT (if required), coping with a crisis, flexibility, having a positive attitude and other interpersonal skills.

3. "What are your weaknesses?"

We tend to focus on weaknesses a lot and ignore our strengths. Yet what might be a weakness in one role is likely to be strength in another, hence why this could be the most difficult question to answer. Don't be afraid to identify what you might not be good at. It not only shows you are human, but it is actually strength to admit your weakness. It demonstrates a healthy balance in how you perceive yourself. Once you present a weakness, show any steps you have already taken to remedy or overcome it.

4. "Do you prefer to work under pressure or in a more relaxed environment?"

This is very important to consider because restaurants can get very busy. If a relaxed environment is really for you, then be honest with your reply, even if you don't get the job. Otherwise you will say what you think they want to hear, and then find out that you can't cope later on when things get really hairy and the chef is going mad.

5. "Do you like routine work? Regular hours?"

Make sure that you really do prefer routine work and give examples of the type of work you have enjoyed to back this up. The hours are going to be long, so consider that and give an honest answer in how you would deal with it. Consider the effects of night work on your social life too so that you are prepared for any questions along those lines.

6. "What interested you most about our restaurant?"

They want to see whether you are being selective in your application or it is just any old job to you. Hopefully, you would have researched the organization before going for the interview to be able to
