AP Environmental Science Course Description

The AP Environmental Science course is designed to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of the natural world and the human impact on the environment. The course is divided into seven units, each covering a specific area of environmental science. The units are: 1. Environmental Science Fundamentals: Ecology, 2. Evolution, 3. Population, 4. Energy and Matter, 5. Biological Systems, 6. Human Impacts on the Environment, and 7. Environmental Quality. The course is designed to be completed over the course of one year, with each unit typically taking 4-6 weeks to complete. The AP Environmental Science exam is held in May of each year and consists of multiple-choice and free-response questions. The exam is designed to assess a student's understanding of the course material and their ability to apply that knowledge to new situations.
