Background of novel, film title, the characters

Gattaca is a 1997 American science-fiction film, written and directed by Andrew Niccol in his feature directorial debut. "The film's government is future society where the citizens who are conceived through genetic selection for more than possess the best hereditary traits of their parents. The film centers on Vincent Freeman, a goody-by-the-book, who was conceived outside the eugenics program and struggles to overcome genetic discrimination as he aspires to go into space.

The film discusses concepts over reproductive technologies that facilitate eugenics, and the possible consequences of such technological developments for society. It also explores the idea of identity and the ways in which it can and does grow & is. Gattaca's eugenically-bred youth with nearly a full-scale discrimination to find their place in the world and why they are destined to be according to their genes. The film is noted for its unique use of color. Colorographer Christopher Johnson employed a palette of green, a soft color that flows throughout the film, and that the film in Super 35mm format, which adds an aged flavor of grain.

The film was shot under the working title The English Day, a reference to the 1990 days of one day in the future. However, by the time of release was re-titled. For the fall of 1997, the Belgian film Le Rêve de ton Head already been released in the US under the title The English Day. As a result, the film was retitled Gattaca, which takes inspiration from the letters G, A, T, and C, derived from four of the nucleobases of DNA: guanine, adenine, thymine and cytosine. The film started at the box office and only made a domestic total of $12.5 million against a reported budget of $34 million. It was a 1997 nominee for the Academy Award for Best Art Direction and the Golden Globe Award for Best Original Score. A follow-up series was in development at Showtime, but has been cancelled as of 2003. Gattaca currently holds an 82% Fresh rating on Rotten Tomatoes with the following critics' consensus: "Solid types and scenes face by genre-busters, Gattaca is an affecting sci-fi drama that poses important but difficult questions about the nature of science." American Literature and Therapeutic Cultures Martin Halliwell, Nicholas Manning, 2026-01-31 This volume explores the myriad interactions between American literature and psychological discourses in the United States from self help to alternative health practices to psychotherapeutic approaches. Spanning the 1940s to the 2020s, it sheds light on the development and conceptualization of therapeutic culture during a century in which it has oscillated between clinical and cultural domains. Bringing together an intergenerational group of scholars from France, the UK and the US, the collection examines authors as varied as William Carlos Williams, Lionel Trilling, Sylvia Plath, Philip Roth, Colson Whitehead, Daniel Suarez and Ottessa Moshfegh. Moving beyond the conventional focus on psychoanalysis, the eleven contributors foreground how American literature is animated by broader therapeutic modes and trajectories. At stake are not only literature's historical links to psychological theories and institutions but the neoliberal framing of literary texts as tools for personal restoration.
