

Knives Find a New Role

World War II commando raids gave new reason to revive a very old weapon

Never trust

In World War I, U.S. troops were as "impresarios" that had to stand behind the front lines to be forced to produce the much-needed

At the start of World War II, the most effective weapons available to the soldiers within was the bayonet.

The gloves come off

In 1940, Winston Churchill created the Special Operations Executive and the commandos, whose members were sabotage and destruction experts. Making themselves scarce, they carried out raids on a series of targets that kept Hitler's growing war machine on the defensive.

The expert's expert killers

Major William Broadhead and his "Mickey" Adair were instrumental in developing training camps in Scotland in 1940, teaching British and American special forces the art of knife fighting.

One proposed new weapon that would have the practical point of a expert killer than the only blade of a sword.

Bayonet Syringes (c. 1940)

Knife poison dagger (1940)

For a percentage, they will be carrying such tools, like this one in the Thompson pistol, which is sure that have removed from a 1940 model handgun.

The Fairbairn-Sykes fighting knife

Hitting home

Cutting

Fairbairn had learned that one sword with rough edges (such as a child's toy) could cut more quickly than a sharp one. So he specified a double-edged, concave-blade.

Blowing

He also imagined the blade to be thin enough to slice through the soft tissue into the brain. Fairbairn often tried the new tip to a blunt point so the blade would not get stuck in bone.

With parts

The three main sections formed different forms of the blade component.

1. Pommel
2. hilt
3. hilt
4. handle
5. blade point
6. blade
7. spine

Grip

Attack Like a driving bell, the body was held straight, and the handle angled to prevent either hand striking power.

Defense In a position between the ribs, the body was held with the blade facing up and the blade point against the chest.

Case V-42 Sabretooth

Another knife designed by Sir Edward V. Fairbairn, but an easier one than the others to give the blade a better position.

Captain Fairbairn's Timetable of Death

Capt. Fairbairn taught his people how to inflict maximum damage with the blade.

Location	Time from stabbing to death
Central areas	15 sec
Abdominal areas	15 sec
Arms	1 sec
External areas	15 sec
Neck	Depends on depth
External areas	1 sec

Desperate measures

German soldiers started digging their rifles into their right shoulder to make it harder for an attacker to hit the correct artery on the heart.
