

Lesson 2. Money Matters

What Has Triggered a Cash-Free Society

The increase in the number of non-cash transactions has been ①triggered by the advancement of ICT (Information and Communication Technology). New technologies have ②given rise to more convenient means of payment. ③The invention of the Internet has brought about an explosive increase in the use of credit cards by making ④it possible for banks, sellers, and customers to exchange information instantly. In the past, credit cards without magnetic strips were troublesome to use ⑤and often unsafe. As the Internet became more popular and computer-programming technology became more sophisticated, Internet banking and Internet payment systems emerged. More recently, wireless communication technology and the smartphone have led to the invention of mobile cards and payment apps.
