Experimental models of early exposure to alcohol: a way to unravel the neurobiology of mental retardation Alberto Granato, Andrea De Giorgio, 2015-01-27 Excessive alcohol drinking represents a major social and public health problem for several countries. Alcohol abuse during pregnancy leads to a complex syndrome referred to as fetal alcohol spectrum disorders (FASD), chiefly characterized by mental retardation. The effects of early exposure to ethanol can be reproduced in laboratory animals, and this helped to answer several key questions concerning the human pathology. The interest of experimental models of FASD is twofold. First, they increase our knowledge about the dose and modality of alcohol consumption able to induce damaging effects on the developing brain. Second, experimental models of FASD can provide useful hints to elucidate the basic mechanisms leading to the intellectual disability. In fact, experimental exposure to alcohol can be carried out during discrete, often very restricted time windows. As a consequence, FASD models, though depending on the multifaceted interference of alcohol with several molecular pathways, can provide valuable information about which specific developmental periods and brain areas are critically involved in the genesis of mental retardation. Putting together data obtained through several experimental paradigms of alcohol exposure and those deriving from other genetic and non genetic models, one can figure out to what extent different types of mental retardation share common pathogenetic mechanisms. The present Research Topic is aimed at establishing the state of the art of the current research on experimental FASD, focusing on differences and homologies with other types of intellectual disability. The ultimate goal is to find out a common roadmap in view of future therapeutic approaches.

Takemura,2022-03-03 Roles and mechanisms of parasitism in aquatic microbial communities Télesphore Sime-Ngando,Kevin D. Lafferty,David G. Biron,2015-07-24 Next Generation Sequencing technologies are increasingly revealing that microbial taxa likely to be parasites or symbionts are probably much more prevalent and diverse than previously thought Every well studied free living species has parasites parasites themselves can be parasitized As a rule of thumb there is an estimated 4 parasitic species for any given host and the better a host is studied the more parasites are known to infect it Therefore parasites and other symbionts should represent a very large number of species and may far outnumber those with free living lifestyles Paradoxically free living hosts which form the bulk of our knowledge of biology may be a minority Microbial parasites typically are characterized by their small size short generation time and high rates of reproduction with simple life cycle occurring generally within a single host They are diverse and ubiquitous in the environment comprising viruses prokaryotes and eukaryotes This Frontiers Research Topic sought to provide a broad overview but concise comprehensive well referenced and up to date state of the art for everyone involved with microbial parasites in aquatic microbial ecology
