Color Psychology Paper

Research Questions:

How does color affect one's mood?

Review of Literature:

Colors may just seem simple and unimportant, but they affect our daily lives more than we may know. If someone is feeling angry, it could just be because they're angry, or it could be perhaps that they are surrounded by or looking at the color red. That's right! People's moods can change just because they are looking at different colors! There are many theories on how just a simple color can change one's whole mood.

According to Johnson (2007), color does affect mood by producing certain chemicals and stimulating different feelings such as hunger. For example, blue can make one feel calm because it releases calming chemicals, and red can make one hungry because it is an appetite stimulant. Yellow can make one feel irritated, and it is a fact that people lose their temper most in yellow rooms. However, pink is tranquilizing and can make one feel weak. In conclusion, Johnson says that depending on the color, one's body can do things (like producing chemicals) that cause a certain emotional reaction (mad, sad, etc.).

Another idea, by Smith (2007), is that the effect color produces is based on what one's body does in response. For example, yellow is mentally stimulating, and activates memory, whereas red increases confidence. Also, brown can make a person feel orderly and stable, while a dark blue can make one feel sad. Therefore, Smith says that different colors do in fact change one's mood and the consequences can be negative or positive.

A third writer, Wolland, (2000) seems to think that color can affect one's mood, but the effect also can depend on one's culture and what one's personal reflection may be. For example, someone from Japan may not associate red with anger, as people from the U.S. tend to do. Also, a person who likes the color brown may associate brown with happiness. However, Wolland does think that colors can make everyone feel the same, or close to the same, mood. According to Wolland, pink reduces aggression, which is why the walls of the jail cells in the Seattle prison are pink! Also, brown can make one feel comforted. Wolland feels that colors do affect one's mood, but there are other factors that can alter what one is supposed to feel.

Eric, John, and Parasg's (2007) main point about color psychology is that color has both a physiological and psychological effect. For example, green makes people feel relaxed because it relaxes their muscles and makes them breathe deeper and more slowly. Furthermore, blue lowers blood pressure, which makes one feel calm. Eric, John, and Parasg conclude that color affects one's mood because of what it does to the body.

Research Methods in Physical Education and Youth Sport Kathleen Armour, Doune Macdonald, 2012-03-15 This is the first research methods book to focus entirely on physical education and youth sport. It guides the reader through the whole research process from the first steps to completion of a dissertation or practice based project and introduces key topics such as formulating a research question, qualitative approaches, quantitative approaches, mixed method research, literature review, case studies, survey interviews, and focus groups. Data analysis, writing the dissertation. Each chapter includes a

Teaching Academic Writing in European Higher Education Lennart Björk, Gerd Bräuer, L. Rienecker, Peter Stray Jørgensen, 2005-12-30 DAVID R RUSSELL English Department of Iowa State University U S A I was fortunate to attend as a visitor from the U S the first European Association for the Teaching of Academic Writing (EATAW) conference in 2001 at Groningen. I was struck by the similarities in the challenges higher education faces on both sides of the Atlantic in terms of developing students' academic writing and students' learning through writing. It is indeed an international problem. But I was equally struck by the profound differences in responding to these challenges among institutions, disciplines, and even within disciplines. The essays in this extraordinary volume address a growing demand for help with academic writing on the part of students and academic staff alike. And they do so in ways that bring fresh approaches not only to Europeans who have only recently begun to study academic writing but also to researchers and academic staff in the U S where we have a century-old tradition of attention to the problem but are much in need of these fresh approaches. Academic writing has become a problem in higher education all around the world because higher education sits smack between two contradictory pressures. On one end, far more students and far more diverse students come streaming into higher education, bringing in a far greater diversity of linguistic resources often interpreted as standards are falling as Frank Haacke Tente point out

Research Papers Edward P. Bailey, Philip A. Powell, Jack M. Shuttleworth, 1981 Doing Media Research Susanna Hornig Priest, 2010 Comprehensive and comprehensible Doing Media Research is an accessible introduction to both qualitative and quantitative methods in media communication. Written in a straightforward and engaging style, this text takes the student through media research step by step. In order to provide students with a thorough understanding of the purpose and theories behind the various methodological approaches, the text is divided into four distinct sections. Part One lays out the foundations to each approach. Part Two describes the types of research questions and data collection required. Part Three details a range of quantitative approaches and Part Four examines qualitative methods. Author Susanna Priest concludes with a discussion of special considerations for current media research, including the feminist contribution, international and intercultural perspectives, and new media technology. She also invites the reader to tackle issues such as ethics, objectivity, and the interpretation of data. Useful exercises are provided at the end of each chapter and there is a glossary which defines key terms and concepts.
