

Whether you are your own boss or manage a large team, recurring tasks take the stress out of work for everyone. Tasks can also be assigned to others, making it easier for you to help your team keep up their productivity.

For example, if you're a manager, you could use recurring tasks to remind your employees' birthdays, work anniversaries, and other milestones. This is a great opportunity to boost morale and celebrate accomplishments. You could also use recurring tasks for quarterly reviews on the horizon and ensure you're prepared. Another great use for recurring tasks is to keep track of work anniversaries. For bonus points, try making a notebook for each employee and put recurring tasks in each of their notes.

Whatever your career or personal life demands of you, recurring tasks can help you stay organized, increase productivity, and make it easier for you to devote your brainpower to other tasks. While recurring tasks may live in your notes, but that doesn't mean they have to be a pain to manage.

How to be more present and increase productivity

When you feel overwhelmed, it can be difficult to stay productive. That distractiveness can affect your effectiveness at work, but your ability to decompress outside of work.
