about how young people understand experience and enact their citizenship in uncertain times and about their senses of membership and belonging It examines how familiar modes of exclusion are compounded by punitive youth policies in ways that are concealed by neoliberal discourses It considers the role of key institutions in constructing young people's citizenship and looks at the ways in which some young people are opting out of established enactments of citizenship while creating new ones Critically reflecting on recent scholarly interest in the geographical relational affective and temporal dimensions of young people's experiences of citizenship it also reinvigorates the discussion about citizenship rights and entitlements and what these might mean for young people The book draws on global research and theories of citizenship but has a particular focus on Australia which provides a unique example of a country that has fared well economically yet is mimicking the austerity measures of the United Kingdom and Europe It concludes with an argument for a rethinking of citizenship which recognises young people's rights as citizens and the ways in which these interact with their lived experience at a time that has been characterised as the end of the age of entitlement

The Political Economy of Low Carbon Transformation Harold Wilhite, 2016-03-10 Deep reductions in energy use and carbon emissions will not be possible within political economies that are driven by the capitalist imperatives of growth commodification and individualization As such it has now become necessary to understand the relationship between capitalism and the emergence of high energy habits Using the examples of home energy transport and food The Political Economy of Low Carbon Transformation articulates the relationship between the politics of economic expansion and the formation of high energy habits at the level of family and household The book elaborates a theory of habit and how it can contribute to this relationship It critiques mainstream green economy and green energy prescriptions for low carbon transformation that take economic growth for granted and ignore habits formed in a material world designed and built for high energy use The book explores the growing number of communities around the world that are engaged in collaborative efforts to reform their community and household habits in ways that are less environmentally intrusive It assesses their potential to make an impact on national and urban low carbon political agendas The book is aimed at a large and growing interdisciplinary audience interested in the relationship between political economy consumption and sustainability The Surveyor & Municipal & County Engineer ,1952 Urbanization and Development ,2016 The analysis of urban development of the past twenty years presented in this maiden edition of the World Cities Report shows with compelling evidence that there are new forms of collaboration and cooperation planning governance finance and learning that can sustain positive change The Report unequivocally demonstrates that the current urbanization model is unsustainable in many respects It conveys a clear message that the pattern of urbanization needs to change in order to better respond to the challenges of our time to address issues such as inequality climate change informality insecurity and the unsustainable forms of urban expansion Books In Print 2004-2005 Ed Bowker Staff,Staff Bowker, Ed,2004
