Geography of Crime in China since the Economic Reform of 1978 Yijing Li,2015-10-05 China has seen dramatic social changes since the Economic Reform of 1978 however the economic upsurge and rapid urbanization present a two edged sword with the consequence of more challenging crime problems This book presents an analysis of criminal issues in China from a geographic perspective utilizing both spatio temporal analysis and qualitative techniques at multiple spatial and temporal scales It pays particularly close attention to a pilot study in Shenzhen city testing the applicability of theories developed in Western society to the Chinese context As such this book is not merely a piece of research work but rather a systematic overview of Chinese national crime issues

Maintenance models for systems subject to measurable deterioration Robin Pieter Nicolai,2008 Complex engineering systems such as bridges roads flood defence structures and power pylons play an important role in our society Unfortunately such systems are subject to deterioration meaning that in course of time their condition falls from higher to lower and possibly even to unacceptable levels Maintenance actions such as inspection local repair and replacement should be done to retain such systems in or restore them to acceptable operating conditions After all the economic consequences of malfunctioning infrastructure systems can be huge In the life cycle management of engineering systems the decisions regarding the timing and the type of maintenance depend on the temporal uncertainty associated with the deterioration Hence it is of importance to model this uncertainty In the literature deterioration models based on Brownian motion and gamma process have had much attention but a thorough comparison of these models lacks In this thesis both models are compared on several aspects both in a theoretical as well as in an empirical setting Moreover they are compared with physical process models which can capture structural insights into the underlying process For the latter a new framework is developed to draw inference Next models for imperfect maintenance are investigated Finally a review is given for systems consisting of multiple components

Producing and Labor Exporting Countries Khalid Alkhathlan, 2008 Oil and workers remittances play an important role in the international economy Only a few articles have been trying to investigate the effects of oil price fluctuations on both oil producing and labor exporting countries For oil producing countries the concentration in production might be the main reason for the fluctuation in export earnings that lead to large changes in export revenues Because of the lack of skilled labor in oil producing countries they are heavily dependant on the skilled workers from labor exporting countries such as Pakistan India Bangladesh Egypt the Philippines and other countries So any oil shock is expected to harm labor exporting countries by influencing the workers remittances This book is expected to enrich the international library with the importance of workers remittances to labor exporting countries I hope that this book will help the international community to realize how negatively the oil price fluctuations would influence poor countries labor exporting countries through affecting workers remittances which are important to macroeconomic variables such as investment consumption and thus gross domestic product GDP
