Prior Knowledge Questions (Do these BEFORE using the Gizmo.)

1. Label one of the skulls below as human and the other as a chimpanzee skull.

	Human			Chimpanzee
---	-------	--	---	------------

2. What features did you use to identify which skull was human and which was chimpanzee?

The chimpanzee has a longer skull and larger jaw bone.

Gizmo Warm-up

In 1924, a fossilized skull that looked very similar to a chimp skull was discovered. But the skull most definitely did not belong to a chimp. The location of the foramen magnum—a hole in the skull where the spinal cord exits—indicated that the individual was bipedal, or walked on two legs. This fossil was some of the earliest evidence of human evolution. Using the Human Evolution – Skull Analysis Gizmo, you will discover some of the ways that skulls can be used to learn about human evolution. Start by comparing two modern hominids: a human and a chimpanzee.

1. Examine the Front view of the Homo sapiens (modern human) skull, use the Select skull menu to examine the same view of the Pan troglodytes (chimp) skull.

Then,

How do the skulls compare?

The human skull has a smaller jaw, smaller teeth, and a larger forehead. Chimpanzees also have a larger nose.

The Accidental Homo Sapiens Ian Tattersall, Robert DeSalle, 2019-04-02 What happens now that human population has outpaced biological natural selection Two leading scientists reveal how we became who we are and what we might become When we think of evolution the image that likely comes to mind is the iconic straight forward image of a primate morphing into a human being Yet random events have played huge roles in determining the evolutionary histories of everything from lobsters to humans However random genetic novelties are most likely to stick in small populations It is mathematically unlikely to happen in large ones With our enormous and seemingly inexorably expanding population humanity has fallen under the influence of the famous or infamous bell curve This revelatory new book explores what the future of our species could hold while simultaneously revealing what we didn't become and what we won't become A cognitively unique species our actions fall on a bell curve as well Individuals may be saintly or evil narrow minded or visionary But it is possible not just for the species but for a person to be all of these things even in a single day We all fall somewhere within the giant hyperspace of the human condition that these curves describe The Accidental Homo Sapiens shows readers that though humanity now exists on this bell curve we are far from a stagnant species Tattersall and DeSalle reveal how biological evolution in modern humans has given way to a cultural dynamic that is unlike anything else the Earth has ever witnessed and that will keep life interesting perhaps sometimes too interesting for as long as we exist on this planet Issues in Human Evolution Lab Manual Marilyn Norconk,2015-08-12 Human Evolution and Survival Ellis E.
