Maps and It's Elements

Geography is a study about earth surface and interaction inside and between another layer, above or below. All the geographical phenomena is spread in the earth. But they have a pattern. Sometimes one phenomenon can't be found in another place. It means that geographical phenomena are unique in the earth. Now, how could we find it? We can map.

It has a 40-ton dimensional weight, with a representation of the earth's surface made with the help of thousands of 1/4-inch beads of wood or stone. The earth's major topographical features of peaks and valleys are represented by small beads. The model is made to look like a globe, but it is not a globe. The globe is the one offered in the store, and the model is the one that is the real thing. It is a globe.

Map is a graphic representation, drawn to scale and usually on a flat surface, of features for example, geographical, geological, or geographical of an area of the Earth or of any other celestial body; globes and maps represented on the surface of a sphere. Cartography is the art and science of making maps and charts.
