High School Dna Report:

Permanent Markers Sarah Abel, 2021-12-16 Over the past twenty years DNA ancestry testing has morphed from a niche market into a booming international industry that encourages members of the public to answer difficult questions about their identity by looking to the genome At a time of intensified interest in issues of race and racism the burgeoning influence of corporations like AncestryDNA and 23andMe has sparked debates about the commodification of identity the antiracist potential of genetic science and the promises and pitfalls of using DNA as a source of objective knowledge about the past This book engages these debates by looking at the ways genomic ancestry testing has been used in Brazil and the United States to address the histories and legacies of slavery from personal genealogical projects to collective racial politics Reckoning with the struggles of science versus capitalism race blind versus race positive public policies and identity fluidity versus embodied experiences of racism Permanent Markers seeks to explain why societies that have broadly embraced the social construction of race continue to search for and find evidence that our bodies are indelibly marked by the past

What We Inherit Sam Trejo, Daphne O. Martschenko, 2026-02-03 Debating the use of genomic tools and their societal impact Over the past decade the field of human genetics has produced an extraordinary range of discoveries including the refinement of polygenic scores which use a person's DNA to estimate their likelihood of developing a trait or disease But are these new technologies ready to leave the research lab and be deployed in schools fertility clinics and the wider world In What We Inherit Sam Trejo and Daphne Martschenko offer different perspectives on the societal impact of the rapidly unfolding DNA revolution Trejo a sociologist and expert on the complex ways people's genes influence their life's trajectory believes that new genomic tools if used thoughtfully can improve society Martschenko a bioethicist who specializes in the thorny social issues raised by biomedical advances is more cautious They debate both the risks and the opportunities posed by such new technologies as at home genetic tests and polygenic embryo selection all while engaging in a wide ranging dialogue on ideology biology and social inequality While grappling with these new technologies Trejo and Martschenko remind us that we inherited from our ancestors not only DNA but also wrongheaded ideas about genes Together they caution against two particularly harmful genetic myths that genes determine an individual's future and that race and genetics are inherently connected A polygenic score for example is not a definitive marker for disease And race is a sociopolitical construct not a biological identity Trejo and Martschenko argue that to avoid exacerbating social inequality we need to begin regulating genomic tools sooner rather than later
