Reading Comprehension Passage

The Hindenburg Disaster

The Hindenburg Disaster was a tragic event that happened a long time ago. It was on May 6, 1937, when the Hindenburg airship caught fire and crashed to the ground. The Hindenburg was a huge, fancy airship that people used to travel from one place to another. It was like a big balloon filled with gas that could float in the sky.

The Hindenburg Disaster happened in Lakehurst, New Jersey. Many people had gathered to see the airship arrive. They were excited to watch it land. But suddenly, something went terribly wrong. A fire broke out on the airship, and it started to burn. People were scared and ran away from the burning airship.

The fire spread quickly, and the Hindenburg crashed to the ground. It was a horrible sight. The airship was completely destroyed. Many people were injured, and sadly, some even lost their lives. It was a very sad day.

Scientists and investigators studied the Hindenburg Disaster to figure out what went wrong. They found out that the airship had been filled with a dangerous gas called hydrogen. Hydrogen is highly flammable, which means it can easily catch fire. The fire on the Hindenburg started because of a spark, which caused the hydrogen to ignite.

After the Hindenburg Disaster, people stopped using hydrogen to fill airships. They started using a safer gas called helium instead. Helium is not flammable, so it is much safer to use. This tragic event taught people an important lesson about safety.

Today, we remember the Hindenburg Disaster as a reminder of the dangers of using flammable gases. It was a sad event that changed the way airships are made. We should always prioritize safety to prevent accidents like this from happening again.
