Paper 1 – ERQ

Most Essays will look like this

Introduction → Central Argument → Supporting Evidence → Counter Arguments → Conclusion

- Central Argument – Shows your knowledge of the topic.
- Supporting Evidence – How do you know what you know. We need to show this. When we can, try to include 3 studies (2 is the minimum).
- Counter Arguments – Critical Thinking/Reflection on topic. We want to try and have 3 Eventually) of these. These may include:
 1. Study Limitations
 2. Alternative explanations of results and impacts
 3. Areas of uncertainty

We aim to have each of these be a 1/3rd of the essay. However, may not always be possible and may be that Evidence becomes ½ while Central Argument and Counter Arguments each become a ¼.

Exemplar Essay: Research Methods Biological Level of Analysis

Paper One: Part B: Discuss how and why one particular research method is used at the biological level of analysis. (22)

One research method that is used at the biological level of analysis (BLA) is the experimental method. The experimental method is when researchers manipulate one or more independent variables in order to measure the effects on a specified dependent variable. This research method is valuable because it allows for clear cause and effect relationships to be determined. This essay will focus on the specific experimental method that uses laboratory experiments on animals and Rosentzweig's example of using an experiment to measure the effects of sensory deprivation and enrichment on neural plasticity will be used to demonstrate how and why this technique is used.

The experimental method at the biological level of analysis requires the manipulation of an independent variable (IV). Either the IV or DV in BLA experiments will be a biological factor. This allows researchers to do one of two things: either they can measure how the biological factor will influence specific behaviours, or they can measure how environmental or cognitive factors have a direct influence on physiological processes.

Most commonly, experiments at the BLA involve the use of a laboratory because this enables researchers to control the confounding variables. By limiting the influence of confounding variables and isolating the independent variables, the results of the research will be more valid as it reduces the possibility that extraneous variables other than the IV will influence the DV. One limitation of using laboratory experiments however is that they might lack ecological validity. This is because the nature of the laboratory with its sterile and unnatural conditions does not reflect real-life situations in which people normally behave.

The Personal and the Professional in Aid Work Anne-Meike Fechter, 2016-03-16 This book considers how the personal and the professional dimensions are related and how they matter for aid work The contributions to this edited volume are based on the assumption that all actors are relevant in development including national and international aid workers A key question which the book explores is why the personal so often remains un acknowledged in development studies even though its salience for aid workers is well documented One possible reason is an implicit narrative of aid work as altruistic and self sacrificing which renders it inappropriate to devote much attention to the experiences of development professionals themselves In order to redress this this book critically considers the kind of difference they make and aims to understand how they respond to the challenges of their work The book explores their efficacy as human beings and employees with individual subjectivities social and cultural beliefs and practices and documents how these shape their involvement in development processes This book was published as a special issue of Third World Quarterly

Peace in Turkey 2023 Tim Jacoby, Alpaslan Özerdem, 2013-01-01 Peace in Turkey 2023 The Question of Human Security and Conflict Transformation by Tim Jacoby and Alpaslan Özerdem explores how the Kurdish conflict could possibly be transformed towards positive peace By drawing on peace conflict transformation and human security theories Peace in Turkey 2023 seeks to redress a long felt concern in Turkey how to address the current challenge of establishing sustainable peace in the country What will Turkey look like at its Republic s centenary celebrations in 2023 Will it be able to resolve the Kurdish crisis through peaceful means and successfully transform the conflict towards positive peace Will it be a country of peace prosperity rule of law and democracy or will the current violence intensify and continue to polarize society To address these questions Jacoby and zerdem use scenario writing derived from peace theory to highlight new ways to consider political violence and the future of Turkey this study will appeal to both specialist and non specialist students and teachers from a diverse range of disciplinary backgrounds Push Back Judith Large,2016-12-15 In 2009 after decades of conflict the Sri Lankan government proclaimed the decisive defeat of the Liberation Tamil Tigers of Elam Subsequently the state proved resistant to attempts by the UN and other international bodies to promote post war reconciliation or reform In this incisive new work Judith Large investigates the ways in which the Rajapaksa government was able to subvert international diplomatic efforts as well as exploring the wider context of rising Sinhalese nationalism the attendant growth of discrimination against minorities and efforts by both the diaspora and citizens within Sri Lanka to work towards a positive peace Push Back is vital reading not only for those interested in Sri Lanka but also for those concerned about the wider implications of the conflict for human rights peace making and geopolitics
