An aerial photograph of a large, circular agricultural field, likely a rice paddy. The field is divided into several concentric rings of green and brown, suggesting different stages of crop growth or different types of crops. A winding path or road cuts through the center of the field, leading towards the bottom right. The overall shape is roughly circular, with the path creating a distinct line through the center.

A close-up photograph of a single red and white striped candy cane. The candy cane is positioned diagonally, with its red stripes and white segments clearly visible. It is set against a background that features a blue and white checkered pattern, likely a tablecloth or a similar fabric. The lighting is soft, highlighting the texture of the candy cane and the pattern of the background.
