- Developing your position statement –
 - The Basis for you position paper is you position statement, which is similar to a thesis or opinion statement of a persuasive essay.
 - Your position statement, has two main jobs:
 - 1. To show knowledge of the topic
 - 2. To provide a specific perspective
- Supporting your position
 - Must create support for you position statement.
 - My support-
 - Background
 - Since a position paper presents an informed argument, you need to spend some time informing the reader about the issue. This part of your paper will convince the reader that you UNDERSTAND you topic.
 - Interpretation
 - Provide an interpretation of the facts given sharing different points of view on the issue and making CONNECTIONS and comparisons between them. In this part of the paper you will analyze the issue in depth.
 - Evaluation
 - The careful analysis you do of the facts, should lead naturally into an evaluation of the different points of view. As you sort through the facts, your own perspective naturally emerges. In this part of your paper, you develop your position.
 - Expansion
 - Once you have established your position, you should show how it applies to life and to the future of the issue.
