

Phase-based joint re-structuring of the network

Phase 1

Since the high performance shown in Figure 8.1, we have continued toward the next step to improve the network's performance. One of the main concerns throughout the network optimization process is the number of nodes. In fact, the more nodes there are, the more difficult it is to maintain the network's performance. Therefore, the main objective of this phase is to reduce the number of nodes and to increase the network's performance. The network's nodes are grouped into regions. Nodes within these regions have the same characteristics. The first step is to group the nodes into regions and, once this is done, the nodes are removed from the network that are not in the same region. The following section describes the first phase of the network optimization.

Initial 3D network graph (a) before

Figure 8.3

Phase	Phase 1	Phase 2	Phase 3	Phase 4	Phase 5
Number of nodes to remove	1	1	1	1	1
Number of nodes to remove due to frequency	1	1	1	1	1
Number of nodes to remove due to region	1	1	1	1	1
Number of nodes to remove due to region and frequency	1	1	1	1	1
Number of nodes to remove due to region and frequency and nodes to remove	1	1	1	1	1
Number of nodes to remove due to region and frequency and nodes to remove and nodes to remove	1	1	1	1	1
Number of nodes to remove due to region and frequency and nodes to remove and nodes to remove and nodes to remove	1	1	1	1	1

Figure 8.2 shows the initial 3D network graph (a) before the first phase of the network optimization. The graph consists of a central cluster of nodes connected by lines, with several other nodes extending outwards in a radial or star-like pattern. The nodes are represented by small spheres, and the connections are thin lines forming a complex web.
